History

The Minneapolis Heritage Preservation Commission (HPC) was created in 1972. The City of Minneapolis created this particular commission for preserving the cultural, social, economic, religious, political, and architectural heritage of Minneapolis. Tasks and objectives of the HPC include: advising the City Council, evaluating historic buildings and districts, conducting research for eligible sites, designating sites as local landmarks, designating sites for demolition, providing education programs and outreach programs, creating a plan for preservation, and administering a preservation plan.

Description of the Collection

Nine boxes: 8 archives boxes, 1 larger document box.

The collection includes nine boxes of various papers that span the years 1970-1987. These papers include meeting agenda and minutes, surveys and reports on proposed preservation sites, correspondence, various organizational documents pertaining to commission history, objectives, and goals, and so on. Included in the collection is one over-sized box containing specific materials on the redevelopment of the Milwaukee Avenue/Seward West area. Some collection materials were donated by Patricia Donovan Baker, a former HPC member.

The collection also includes a large number of encapsulated building plans primarily depicting the restoration of Milwaukee Avenue and several single item monographs put together over the years by the Minneapolis Heritage Preservation Commission.
